FRANK H. BAKER, Supt.

Fresh Shell and Tub Oysters and Clams

SERVED DAILY AT THE

PARLOR RESTAURANT

At Wyal—— and Retail.

Citizen (to friend of boasting hero): "Did you ever hear him tell of beating Ben?" Friend: "Yes. I thought some of peace [illegible] as undersaids [illegible] from [illegible] another from [illegible] another from [illegible] another will pass here or there, and in this way they all present, alike to themselves and their easy-going and indifferent or overbusy doctor, separate and distinct diseases, for which he prescribes his pills and potions, assuming them to be such, when, in reality, they are all only symptoms caused by some womb disorder. The physician, ignorant of the cause of suffering, discourages his "practice" until large bills are made. The suffering patient gets no better, but probably worse by reason of the delay, wrong treatment and consequent complications. A proper medicine, like Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription directed to the cause would have entirely removed the disease, thereby dispelling all those distressing symptoms, and instituting comfort instead of prolonged misery.

It's the only medicine for the weaknesses, irregularities and painful derangements peculiar to women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee that it will give satisfaction in every case, or price ($1 00) paid for it will be promptly refunded.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets regulate the liver, stomach and bowels. One a dose. Sold by druggists. 25 cents a vial.

Time Table in Effect November 17, 1889.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The following named persons are announced as candidates for the office specified below, subject to the decision of the Democratic County Convention:

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER,
HARRY D. WHEELER, of Delmar.
C. H. TREMAINE, of Lawrence.

I hereby announce myself as a Democratic candidate for County Commissioner.
C. H. DEWITT, Mansfield, Pa.

LAST Friday Judge McPherson, at Harrisburg, handed down an opinion that the revenue act of 1889 is constitutional, even though it does exempt certain classes of manufacturing corporations from taxation on capital stock and imposes it on others.

"DENSE RATE Governors in Rhode Island, Iowa and Ohio" ejaculates the Utica N. Y. Observer. And the Providence R. I. Journal suggests that "the question is whether the Republican party can make new States as fast as it is losing the old ones."

THE death of Samuel J. Randall leaves Charles O'Neill, of the Second Pennsylvania District, Father of the House. Thus the mantle has fallen successively on the shoulders of three Philadelphians. Mr. O'Neill entered the House during the Thirty-eighth Congress and has served continuously ever since.

ONLY a short time ago the Philadelphia Press asked Senator Delamater to explain the charges made against him by ex-Senator Emery. But Delamater is evidently following Quay's advice, and is as silent as a clam. By the way, isn't it about time for Quay to either deny or affirm the truth of the New York World's damaging charges?

WHY not place a heavy duty on ice? We haven't got a big supply, but then our American streams need protecting. They are "infant industries" and should not be placed in a position where they would be forced to compete with congealed Canadian water. By all means place a tariff on ice and protect American streams. This act is very essential.

DISCOURAGED by the manner in which the value of farm lands is steadily depreciating, the agriculturalists of the county of Montgomery, Delaware, Berks and Chester have formed an organization which they call the "Farmers' Union." Its object is to benefit and protect, if possible, the interests of the farmers and it seeks the co-operation of similar organizations having the same end in view. The Harrisburg Patriot gives the agriculturalists the following bit of advice:—Let them get together from one end of the country to the other and bear down on the infamous tariff and until not a stone upon a single foundation is left the object of their attack. Then, and only then, will they receive what they earn by the sweat of their brow.

THE only commendable features of the work of the Republican Ways and Means Committee in preparing its tariff bill, are the placing of hides and sugar on the free list. There is one drawback to the sugar clause, however, and that is in providing a bounty of two cents per pound for the domestic product. Tariff reform does not contemplate the payment of bounties, as it would permit the producer to buy and sell in a tariff reform market. Under McKinley's monopoly tariff bill the producer must have a bounty or go to the wall, because he is forced to sell in a free trade market and purchase his supplies in a market guarded by a monopolistic tariff. McKinley will have to give all the farmers a bounty if his bill passes, to keep them from the hospitable doors of the poor house.

MCKINLEY attempts to console the farmers for the low prices they are receiving for their crops, by increasing the cost of the manufactured goods which they are compelled to purchase. He tells the farmer that the present depression is due to "foreign agricultural products crowding our home market," and by increasing the import duties on wheat and corn he is going to put a stop to this state of affairs. But the farmer cannot profit as he is to be benefited by this plan, as no wheat or corn is imported, and then McKinley further advises him that his bill is "for the better defense of American homes." McKinley, however, forgets to tell the farmer that he is forced to sell his wheat and corn in accordance with quotations from the Liverpool (free trade) market; and purchase his cloth ing, farm machinery, etc., under a monopoly protection market.

AT a recent banquet of the Army and Navy Club, of Hartford, Conn., President Andrews, of Brown University, an old soldier, was present as an invited guest. In responding to a toast he indulged in the following remarks in regard to service pension scheme:

[illegible] the soldiers [illegible] and until not a stone upon a single foundation is left the object of their attack. Then, and only then, will they receive what they earn by the sweat of their brow.

[illegible] applause [illegible] that he viewed the sentiment of the [illegible] as the pretext and not the [illegible]

McKINLEY'S [illegible] tariff bill if it has not already—will soon—split in the Republican party. Mr. McKenna, Republican from California, has filed a minority report, opposing the "sugar-bounty scheme." No Ways and Means majority was ever so demoralized as this one is. It brings out its little bill half dead to face an opposition encouraged from within its own ranks. McKenna's actions show how wide the committee differences are, for he, like all the rest, had agreed to abide by the decision of the majority. But the time came he thought when he could no longer do so without misrepresenting his constituents. No concession has been made to the carpet manufacturers, who desired cheaper wool that they might continue in business. McKinley has been a long time in preparing this bill, and as a result of the delay and vacillation the Ways and Means Republicans have found more in sense opposition than they met at first. The Republicans should pass this bill and thus ensure a first-class Republican funeral and the election of a Democratic President and Congress. The people want tariff reform and not monopoly protection.

THE following from the Lock Haven Democrat is heartily endorsed by the GAZETTE. "The Altoona Tribune had a five or six line item the other day which stated that if Mr. Wallace was made the Democratic nominee for Governor this fall it would pledge the Pennsylvania Democracy to Hill for President in 1892, and that if Mr. Pattison was made the nominee it would mean Cleveland. It should be distinctly understood by the Tribune and all others that the nomination of either of these gentlemen will mean nothing of the sort. The Democratic party of Pennsylvania is not carried around in any man's vest pocket, to be taken between the political thumb and forefinger and handed out to anybody who may be personally favored by applicants for Gubernatorial or other positions. No, gentlemen, not a bit of it; that day has gone by. What the Democracy are looking for now is a candidate for Governor who will be able to knock the hide off the Republican nominee and seat himself in the chair of State at Harrisburg. This is all at present. The Presidential matter will be attended to by the Democratic people themselves at the proper season."

AN INTELLIGENT MONOPOLIST.

The poetic condition of the senile and effete Agitator causes it to entertain some very peculiar views regarding the tariff question. With all the gravity at the command of so complete a victim of paresis it displays its "dense ignorance" in matters of political economy by asserting that the GAZETTE was in error last week when it stated that the imports of actual farm produce were but one-thousandth part of the exports of agricultural products pure and simple. Then with an evident disregard for the truth it says the agricultural imports for 1889 amounted to $75,927,000. If the shattered advocate of the coal companies' interests in Tioga county will refer to the report of agricultural imports and exports for 1889 it will learn, if capable, that the total amount of imports of this description for the year in question amounted to but $56,636,385. This includes animals, [illegible] fruits and nuts, eggs, hay, hops, seeds, tobacco and vegetables. Now, if fruits and tobacco and animals imported for improving stock should be eliminated from the McKinley bill, the so-called imports of agricultural products would not amount to more than one-half of the amount mentioned by the fat-witted organ of monopoly.

From the report of imports and exports for 1889, it is learned that during that year the agricultural exports amounted to the enormous sum of $599,507,055, or about 73 per cent. of the total exports of the country, breadstuffs and dairy products being the leading articles of export. During the year 1889, the exports of wheat and flour amounted to $89,747,141; and the imports to just $35,615, or less than one-thousandth part of the exports.

This shows very plainly just how much the farmer will be benefited by increasing the tariff on wheat, corn, etc. Every intelligent farmer in the country—the monopoly Agitator to the contrary—knows that the country depends upon the foreign market for the sale of its vast surplus of agricultural products; and every intelligent farmer will readily perceive that he will not be benefited by an increase of duty on these articles. The McKinley must—addition won't work with the [illegible] rule of multiplication.

THE MINORITY REPORT.

Democratic Members of the Ways and Means Committee Dissent.

The minority report on the McKinley tariff bill is signed by all of the five Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee. After declaring for the principle of just and equal taxation, the report begins by saying that the majority, representing the Republican party, has committed itself to the policy of unjust and unequal taxation.

"The prolonged discussion before the Committee during the present session," says the report, "was not between the individuals and corporations who receive the taxes and the consumers who pay them, for very few of these were heard, but between the representatives of the various protected industries, each class contending for higher rates on its own products or for lower rates on the products of others. Except in cases where conflictions were made between interests [illegible] the majority has been [illegible] to the demands of the protected manufacturers. The consumers have been [illegible] right to appear before the committee, and their interests have been [illegible] the majority of the committee. [illegible] the duties [illegible] the markets [illegible] right to appear before the committee, and their interests have been [illegible] the majority of the committee. [illegible] the duties [illegible] the markets [illegible] etc., in the matter the witnesses [illegible] cheers which greeted his remarks, and that he viewed the sentiment of the [illegible] pretext and not the [illegible]

The report then argues [illegible] showing a remarkable hardihood in [illegible] and endorsing the McKinley monopoly tariff bill. "Men are [illegible] vacillating [illegible] they are unable to rest and are busily inventing excuses for the [illegible] glaring inconsistencies of the measure as reported to the House. When Mr. Kinley first announced his bill these papers fairly jumped over each other in their haste to approve of the [illegible]. But strange to say, as [illegible] details was made to the bill it [illegible] and end. After 136 days of [illegible] of wabbling it is difficult [illegible] to say just [illegible] Ways [illegible] Committee [illegible] on the tariff [illegible] Ways [illegible] for the people of the United States. The [illegible] 181,000, paid for [illegible] by our surplus agricultural products. It [illegible] to have [illegible] for the people of the United States. [illegible] one hundred and fifty did not do it.

[illegible] of the [illegible] in favor of [illegible] the [illegible] and to be [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Of course putting a duty on raw hides wouldn't bring forth any such remarks."

—Many farmers in the vicinity of Cherry Flats are offering their farms for sale. Farms which only a few years ago sold for from $10,000 to $15,000, can be purchased at half price. The farmers are leaving to their sorrow that the tariff is a tax.

—Mr. B. C. VanHorn, of this borough, is carrying his arm in a sling. He has been at work on the miners' hospital at Blossburg, and while crossing a creek on a plank at that place last Monday he fell to the bank of the stream, spraining his right arm badly.

—The dwelling house of Mr. F. M. Andrews, of Marsh Creek, was destroyed by fire about ten o'clock last Saturday morning. Most of the household goods were saved. The loss is estimated at $3,000; fully insured. The fire originated from a defective chimney.

—A Paris dispatch of last Friday says that a discovery of vital importance has just been made, which proves that essence of cinnamon when sprinkled in the room of a typhoid fever patient kills the bacteria within twelve hours and prevents the disease from spreading.

—Mr. R. L. Mack met with a serious accident last Friday morning. While in the woods on his farm at Stokesdale he caught his foot and fell, breaking his left leg at the ankle joint. He was some distance from the house and suffered a great deal of pain before he received aid.

—James Morrell, of Delmar, was arraigned before Justice A. S. Brewster on Saturday evening on a charge of assault and battery, preferred by D. L. Copp, also of Delmar. Morrell waived an examination and gave bail for his appearance before the next grand jury.

—The stock of groceries of Saxton & Seely has been purchased by Messrs. Louis Doumaux and George W. Riberolle, who took possession last Monday. Both gentlemen are well and favorably known to the people in the locality. We wish the new firm of Doumaux & Riberolle success.

The line is first class in every respect, and the very best accommodations now provided for patrons.

He returned from the West, [illegible] to the Wellsboro House, Mr. Parsons [illegible] dwelling [illegible] by the Reading Farmers' League the question, "Does our present tariff benefit the American farmer?" was voted upon. Notwithstanding a majority of its members are Republicans, there was not one affirmative vote cast! This shows the drift of sentiment among the farmers who have studied and discussed the tariff issue.

—P. D. Brinker, Esq., Supervisor of the Census for this district, has completed his work of appointing enumerators, and has sent the list of applicants to Washington, to be approved or disapproved by Superintendent Porter. The eleven counties of this district are divided into 289 sub-districts, not 280 as some statements have made it, and are taken alphabetically, and the sub-districts are numbered [illegible] county and number 289, the last one, being in Tioga.

—We have it from Mr. C. L. Willcox that he contemplates thoroughly overhauling and remodeling Willcox Hall and transforming it into a first-class opera house. Both the second and third floors are to be used, and the rear part of the building is to be extended over the alley-way for the stage. The plans of Mr. Willcox are excellent, and the public would be delighted if he carries them out. Wellsboro is easily in need of a good hall that can be rented at a reasonable figure by first-class show companies.

—Prof. H. E. Raesly, of this borough, is a candidate for Superintendent of Schools in this county. He has been principal of the Wellsboro Public Schools for the past eleven years and is one of the best scholars and teachers in the county. While we have no fault to find with any other candidate for the position, yet local pride in Prof. Raesly's ability, coupled with a long personal acquaintance with the gentleman as a citizen and a teacher, make us wish him success. If elected he will be an honor to the important position he aspires to.

The County Commissioners expect to have the iron bridge in Covington borough completed by the first of August. The bridge will consist of one span 180 feet in length and 16 feet wide. JAMES ENGLISH'S PREDICAMENT.

He Was Fined for Passing a Counterfeit Dollar by Over-Anxious Officers.

Last Thursday Mr. James S. English was deputized by the County Commissioners to accompany Messrs R. S. Dartt and Isaac Anthony, who were going to the National Soldier's Home at Hampton, Va., as far as Elmira. English was given a $10 bill by the Commissioners to pay the expenses of the trip to Elmira. This bill was given to the Fall Brook ticket agent at this place, who gave English in return the tickets to Elmira and several silver dollars. Arriving at Elmira Dartt and Anthony complained of feeling hungry and the party repaired to Geer's restaurant and saloon in the rear of the Erie depot. English gave the bar tender in payment one of the silver dollars he had received at this station. After giving the purse of money a careful examination the barkeep handed it back to English, saying it was a very poor counterfeit. The latter was very much surprised and pulling out the other dollars, remarked, "May be I have some more of the same kind." No other counterfeits were found and the bartender accepted one of the pieces in payment of the bill.

The party then left the restaurant, and at about one o'clock English went to the Erie depot to take the train west for Corning, where he hoped to make connections with a Fall Brook train and reach Wellsboro at six o'clock. Just as he stepped upon the depot platform he was requested to go to Geer's saloon by a couple of policemen, one of whom claimed that English had some papers in his possession that he wished to examine. At the saloon English was searched and the counterfeit dollar found in a small memorandum book. He was then taken to Chief of Police Little's office, where he was again searched and catechised as to

The Joys We Have Not Got.

Content is a jewel we seem that very few of us possess.

We wonder how many of the things we need we have in our lives.

The years strive to drive us into pleasing ways, and yet

We're ever vainly sighing for the joys we can not get.

The tall man wishes he were short, the short man would be tall,

The little man would weigh a ton, the large man would be small;

The dark brunette would be a blonde, the blonde a dark brunette,

And everywhere is yearning for the joys we can not get.

The tender youths are wishing for maturer years of men,

And older hearts are sighing to be tender youths again.

Whatever we have or haven't is a source of real regret,

We'd throw away the joys we have for those we can not get.

I have many young men, there, a few of whom are married, and they are all struggling to get a start in life. Now, if I should tell you what we are [illegible] physicians are waiting as they always do from dyspepsia or other functional heart disorder, from nervous exhaustion or prostration, another will pass here or there, and in this way they all prosper, alike to themselves and their easy-going and indifferent or overbusy doctor, separate and distinct diseases, for which he prescribes his pills and potions, assuming them to be such, when, in reality, they are all only symptoms caused by some womb disorder. The physician, ignorant of the cause of suffering, encourages his 'practice' until large bills are made. The suffering patient gets no better, but probably worse by reason of the delay, wrong treatment and consequent complications. A proper medicine, like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription directed to the cause would have entirely removed the disease, thereby dispelling all those distressing symptoms, and instituting comfort instead of prolonged misery.

It's the only medicine for the weaknesses, irregularities and painful derangements peculiar to women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee that it will give satisfaction in every case, or price ($1 00) paid for it will be promptly refunded.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets regulate and cleanse the liver, stomach and bowels. One a dose. Sold by druggists. 25 cents a vial.

Sweetheart Robin.

Interlocked boughs of the hawthorn hedge,
How barely your brown twigs glisten!
What! have your blossoms forgotten their pledge?
Is it not May-time? Listen!
Surely I heard a bluebird sing,
And smelt the breath of the clover!
What is the word he was whispering
Whispering over and over?

Indistinctly, how late thou art,
Thou Spring-time's earliest comer!
The Goddess of Summer is in my heart,
And on my cheek there is summer.
The blue me through at the bluebird's eye
As the sun when it kisses the clover;
Against my cheek did a sunbeam fall?
Ah, why was he bending over?

Petals of white from the hawthorn rose
Over the lush grass blowing.
Life in my heart as your breezes be—
What, surely it required to answer?
A sunbeam ago the orgasm-cell skies
Are bent above, bride of clover!
[Why and he look me his love in the eyes?
A—why did my head drop over?]

I know that I heard a bluebird's call;
[That word for a whole heart's hushing!]
I know that I felt a sunbeam fall;
[Ah, what on my cheek was brushing?]
The sky showed never a sign of rain;
[His eyes—he was bending over!]
And I know though I walked in a Winter lane,
I smelt the breath of clover!

QUATERMAIN'S WIFE.

By H. RIDER HAGGARD,

Author of "Colonel Quaritch, V. C.," "Mr. Meeson's Will," "A Tale of Three Lions," "Allan Quatermain," "She," "Jess," etc.

SYNOPSIS OF THE STORY.

This story is supposed to be founded upon a manuscript found in the papers of Allan Quatermain, which was given to the author as literary executor. In it Quatermain tells the story of his marriage.

CHAPTER I.—Describes Allan's first meeting, when a child, with Stella Carson, at a Christmas gathering. Stella's dress caught fire and Allan extinguished the flames. Stella's mother was Spanish, and she eloped with a captain leaving Stella with her father, Squire Carson. He determined to leave England on account of the disgrace, and at about the same time Allan's mother died and Allan's father took him to South Africa, where Mr. Quatermain became a successful farming the Kaffirs. When Allan was 20 his father died.

CHAPTER II.—Allan sold the effects and decided to go on a journey of exploration and research. Among his men was a Kaffir named Indaba-zimbi, a witch doctor. Between him and another witch doctor there had been a lightning contest, which resulted in the death of his competitor.

CHAPTER III.—Details the start of the expedition. Quatermain describes his first elephant hunt.

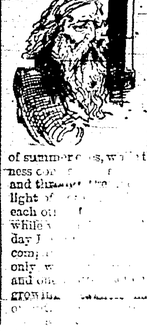
CHAPTER IV.—Quatermain discovered a large body of Zulus, and was surprised by two of them, Scoff. Acting upon the impulse of the moment, he shot both of them and retreated. The Zulus had been following a party of Dutch Boers, consisting of seventy-three men, their wives and children, and a large number of cattle, with which they were returning to the north. For safety's sake the cattle and some of the women and children were sent away, while Quatermain, the witch doctor and several of the Boers remained. The [illegible] ing by a ruse, Quatermain and Indaba-zimbi were captured by the Zulus.

CHAPTER V.—Quatermain discovered that Indaba-zimbi had conveyed him into the centre of the Zulus, who at first offered him no harm. The camp of the Boers was attacked and destroyed. One little child only was saved alive and Quatermain pondered her by fighting a duel with and killing a Zulu warrior. The witch doctor had cast a spell on Quatermain's wife, Stella, [illegible] had to kill him, but was prevented by Indaba, who previously had promised to kill Quatermain and then bring him to life again. This frightened the Zulus, and Indaba and Quatermain, with the child, made their escape.

CHAPTER VI.—Describes the manner of escape of Quatermain with the witch doctor and Tota, the child. Indaba said "Go north," prophesying that [illegible] would be found there. Quatermain obeyed, though against his judgment. They traversed a broad desert, where there was no water, and at its end they became unconscious. When they recovered, they were being cared for by Stella Carson, whose life Quatermain saved when a child, and who now is a beautiful young woman. Since early childhood she had lived in the wilds of Africa with her father, never having seen but [illegible] Englishmen.

CHAPTER VII.—Stella was accompanied by a baboon when a child and rescued by Stella's father. Hendrika, a [illegible] quarreled, and Hendrika objected to Quatermain's being taken to Stella's home, but was overruled. The home of Mr. Carson, who was sick at this time, was a mass of white marble buildings, built like Zulu huts, only [illegible] Quatermain, Indaba and Stella found them ready to [illegible] hand when he settled there.

CHAPTER VIII is devoted to a description of Mr. Carson's place. He had a thousand natives with him, and [illegible] Stella [illegible] Hendrika, the cause of his daughter, though she had never left the vicinity. Old [illegible] near, and Stella showed them to Quatermain, when a rather alarming encounter with baboons, who swarmed around, occurred. Hendrika quelled the disturbance, and Indaba warned Quatermain of her, saying, "She is jealous of Stella, the Star," and "the way do her harm if she becomes too much attached to you."



CHAPTER IX.

TIS very difficult for me to describe the period of time which elapsed between my arrival at Babyan's Peak and my marriage with Stella. When I look back on it it seems sweet as with the odor of flowers, and dim as with the happy dusk [illegible] of summer eves, while [illegible] ness [illegible] and the [illegible] light [illegible] each [illegible] while [illegible] day [illegible] comp [illegible] only [illegible] and [illegible] grow [illegible] den to the orange grove and sat down there upon a rock. There was a little breeze which shook the petals of the orange bloom over us in showers, and bore their delicate fragrance far and wide. Silence reigned around, broken only by the sound of the falling waterfalls that now died to a faint murmur, and now, as the wavering breeze turned, boomed loudly in our ears. The moon was not yet visible, but already the dark clouds that floated through the sky above us for there had been rain—showed a glow of silver, telling us that she shone brightly behind the peak.

Stella began to talk in her low, gentle voice, telling me of her life in the wilderness, how she had grown to love it, how her mind had gone on from idea to idea, and how she pictured the great rushing world that she had never seen as it was told to her from the books which she had read. It was a curious vision of life that she had, things were out of proportion and it was more like a dream than a reality, a mirage than the actual face of things. The idea of great cities, and especially of London, had a kind of fascination for her; she could scarcely realize the rush, the roar and hurry, the hard crowds of men and women, strangers each to each, feverishly seeking for wealth and pleasure beneath a murky sky, and treading one another down in the fury of competition.

"What is it all for?" she asked, earnestly. "What do they seek? Having so few years to live, why do they waste them thus?"

I told her that in the majority of instances it was actual hard necessity that drove them on, but she could scarcely realize it. Living as she had done, in the midst of the teeming plenty of the fruitful earth, she did not seem to understand that there are millions who from day to day know not how to slay their hunger.

"I never want to go there," she went on. "I should be bewildered and frightened to death. It is not natural to live like that. God put Adam and Eve in a garden, and that is how he meant their children to live—in peace, and looking always on beautiful things. This is my idea of perfect life—— and my wisdom."

"I thought that you once told me that you found it lonely," I said.

"So I did," she answered innocently, "but that was before you came. Now I am not lonely any more, and it is perfect—perfect as the night."

Just then the full moon rose above the elbow of the peak, and her rays stole far and wide down the misty valley, gleaming on the water, brooding on the plain, searching out the hidden places of the rocks, wrapping the fair form of nature as in a silver bridal veil through which her beauty shone mysteriously.

Stella looked down the terraced valley, she turned and looked up at the scarred face of the golden moon, and then she looked at me. The beauty of the night was on her face, the scent of the night was on her hair, the mystery of the night shone in her shadowed eyes. She looked at me, I looked at her, and all our hearts' love blossomed within us. We spoke no word—we had no words to speak, but slowly we drew near, till lips were pressed to lips and we blood our eternal troth.

It was she who broke that holy silence, speaking in a changed voice, in soft deep notes that thrilled me like the lowest chords of a smitten harp.

"Ah, now I understand," she said, "now I know why we are lonely, and how we can lose our loneliness. Now I know what it is that is in the beauty of the sky, in the sound of water and in the scent of flowers. It is love that speaks in everything, but till we hear his voice we understand nothing. But when we hear then the riddle is answered and the gates of our heart are opened, and, Allan, we see the way that wends through death to heaven, and is lost in the glory of which our love is but a shadow.

"Let us go in, Allan. Let us go before the spell breaks, so that whatever comes to us, sorrow, death or separation, we may always have this perfect memory to save us."

I rose like a man in a dream, still holding her by the hand. But as I rose my eyes fell upon something that gleamed white among the foliage of the orange bush at my side. I said nothing, but looked. The breeze stirred the orange leaves, the moonlight struck for a moment full upon the white object.

It was the face of Hendrika, the babyan woman, as Indaba-zimbi had called her, and on it was a glare of hate that made me shudder.

I said nothing; the face vanished, and just then I heard a baboon bark in the rocks behind.

Then we went down the garden, and Stella passed into the center hut. I saw Hendrika standing in the shadow near the door and went up to her.

"Hendrika," I said, "why were you watching Miss Stella and myself in the garden?"

She drew her lips up till her teeth gleamed in the moonlight.

"Have I not watched her these many years, Macumazahn? Shall I cease to watch her because a wandering white man comes to steal her? Why were you kissing her in the garden, Macumazahn? How dare you kiss her who is a star?"

"I kissed her because I love her, and because she loves me," I answered.

"What has that to do with you, Hendrika?"

"Because you love her, she hissed in answer, "and do I not love her? Has she not been to me from the [illegible] upon earth is, and yet [illegible] of [illegible] and [illegible] this [illegible] but [illegible] and who has not seen cases of the same thing where parents and their children were concerned? But the lower one gets in the scale of humanity the more readily this passion thrives; indeed, it may be said to come to its topmost perfection in brutes. Women are more jealous than men, small hearted men are more jealous than those of larger mind and wider sympathy, and animals are the most jealous of all. Now Hendrika was in some way not far removed from animal, which may perhaps account for the ferocity of her jealousy of her mistress' affection.

Shaking off my presentiments of evil, I entered the center hut. Mr. Carson was resting on the sofa, and by him knelt Stella, holding his hand, and her head resting on his breast. I saw at once that she had been telling him of what had come about between us, nor was I sorry, for it is a task that a would-be son-in-law is generally glad to do by deputy.

"Come here, Allan Quatermain," he said, almost sternly, and my heart gave a jump, for I feared lest he might be about to require me to go about my business. But I came.

"Stella tells me," he went on, "that you two have entered into a marriage engagement. She tells me also that she loves you, and that you say that you love her."

"I do indeed, sir," I broke in; "I love her truly; if ever a woman was loved in this world I love her."

"I thank heaven for it," said the old man. "Listen, my children. Many years ago a great shame and sorrow fell upon me, so great a sorrow that, as I sometimes think, it affected my brain. At any rate, I determined to do what most men would have considered the act of a madman, to go far away into the wilderness with my only child, there to live remote from civilization and its evils. I did so; I found this place, and here we have lived for many years, happily enough, and perhaps not without doing good in our generation, but still in a way unnatural to our race and status. At first I thought that I would let my daughter grow up in a state of complete ignorance, that she should be nature's child. But as she went on, I saw the folly and the wickedness of my plan. I had no right to degrade her to the level of the savages around me, for if the fruit of the tree of knowledge is a bitter fruit, still it teaches good from evil. So I educated her as well as I was able, till in the end I knew that in mind, as in body, she was in no way inferior to her sisters, the children of the civilized world.

She grew up and entered into womanhood, and then it came into my mind that I was doing her a bitter wrong, that I was separating her from her kind and keeping her in a wilderness where she could find neither mate nor companion. But though I knew this, I could not yet make up my mind to return to active life; I had grown to love this place. I dreaded to return into the world I had abjured. Again and again I put my resolutions aside. Then at the commencement of this year I fell ill. For a while I waited, hoping that I might get better, but at last I realized that I should never get better, that the hand of death was upon me."

"Ah, no, father, not that!" Stella said, with a cry.

"Yes, love, that, and it is true. Now you will be able to forget our separation in the happiness of a new meeting," and he glanced at me and smiled. "Well, when this knowledge came home to me, I determined to abandon this place and trek for the coast, though I well knew that the journey would kill me. I should never live to reach it. But Stella would, and it would be better than leaving her here alone with savages in the wilderness. On the very day that I had made up my mind to take this step Stella found you dying in the bad lands, Allan Quatermain, and brought you here. She brought you, of all men in the world, you, whose father had been my dearest friend, and who now [illegible] hands had saved her life from fire, that she might live to save yours from thirst. At the time I said little, but I saw the hand of Providence in this, and I determined to wait and see what came about between you. At the worst, if nothing came about, I soon learned that I could trust you to see her safely to the coast after I was gone. But many days ago I knew how it stood between you, and now things have come about as I prayed they might. God bless you both, my children; may you be happy in your love; may it endure till death and beyond it. God bless you both," and he stretched out his hand toward me.

I took it, and Stella kissed him.

Presently he spoke again:

"It is my intention," he said, "if you two consent, to marry you next Sunday. I wish to do so soon, for I do not know how much longer will be allowed to me. I believe that such a ceremony, solemnly celebrated and entered into before witnesses, will, under the circumstances, be perfectly legal; but of course you will repeat it with every formality the first moment it lies in your power to do so. And now, there is one more thing: when I left England my fortunes were in a shattered condition; in the course of years they have recovered themselves, the accumulated rents, as I heard but recently, when the wagons last returned from Port Natal, have sufficed to pay off all charge, and [illegible] is a considerable [illegible] currently you will not [illegible] of [illegible] radiant [illegible] old, [illegible] this [illegible]

it is change, that is all, Macumazahn. Look now, the rain falls, the drops of rain that were once water in the clouds fall side by side. They sink into the ground, presently the sun will come out, the earth will be dry, the drops will be gone. A fool looks and says the drops are dead, they will never be one again, they will never again fall side by side. But I am a rain maker, and I know the ways of rain. It is not true. The drops will drain into the river and will be one water there. They will go up into the clouds again in the mists of morning, and there will again be as they have been. We are the drops of rain, Macumazahn. When we fall, that is our life. When we sink into the ground, that is death, and when we are drawn up again to the sky, what is that, Macumazahn? No! no! when we find, we lose; and when we begin to lose, then we shall really find. I am not a Christian, Macumazahn, but I am old, and have watched and seen things that perhaps Christians do not see. There, I have spoken. Be happy with your star, and if it sets, wait, Macumazahn, wait till it rises again. It will not be long; one day you will go to sleep, then your eyes will open on another sky, and there your star will be shining, Macumazahn."

I made no answer at the time. I could not bear to talk of such a thing. But often and often in the after years I have thought of Indaba-zimbi and his beautiful simile and gathered comfort from it. He was a strange man, this old rain making savage, and there was more wisdom in him than in many learned atheists—those spiritual destroyers who in the name of progress and humanity would divorce hope from life, and leave us wandering in a lonesome, self consecrated hell.

"Indaba-zimbi," I said, changing the subject: "I have something to say," and I told him of the threats of Hendrika.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The following named persons are announced as candidates for the office specified below, subject to the decision of the Democratic County Convention:

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER,
HARRY D. WHEELER, of Delmar.
C. H. TREMAINE, of Lawrence.

I hereby announce myself as a Democratic candidate for County Commissioner.
C. H. DEWITT, Mansfield, Pa.

LAST Friday Judge McPherson, at Harrisburg, handed down an opinion that the revenue act of 1889 is constitutional, even though it does exempt certain classes of manufacturing corporations from taxation on capital stock and imposes it on others.

"DENSE RATE Governors in Rhode Island, Iowa and Ohio" ejaculates the Utica N. Y. Observer. And the Providence R. I. Journal suggests that "the question is whether the Republican party can make new States as fast as it is losing the old ones."

THE death of Samuel J. Randall leaves Charles O'Neill, of the Second Pennsylvania District, Father of the House. Thus the mantle has fallen successively on the shoulders of three Philadelphians. Mr. O'Neill entered the House during the Thirty-eighth Congress and has served continuously ever since.

ONLY a short time ago the Philadelphia Press asked Senator Delamater to explain the charges made against him by ex-Senator Emery. But Delamater is evidently following Quay's advice, and is as silent as a clam. By the way, isn't it about time for Quay to either deny or affirm the truth of the New York World's damaging charges?

WHY not place a heavy duty on ice? We haven't got a big supply, but then our American streams need protecting. They are "infant industries" and should not be placed in a position where they would be forced to compete with congealed Canadian water. By all means place a tariff on ice and protect American streams. This act is very essential.

DISCOURAGED by the manner in which the value of farm lands is steadily depreciating, the agriculturalists of the county of Montgomery, Delaware, Berks and Chester have formed an organization which they call the "Farmers' Union." Its object is to benefit and protect, if possible, the interests of the farmers and it seeks the co-operation of similar organizations having the same end in view. The Harrisburg Patriot gives the agriculturalists the following bit of advice:—Let them get together from one end of the country to the other and bear down on the infamous tariff and until not a stone upon a single foundation is left the object of their attack. Then, and only then, will they receive what they earn by the sweat of their brow.

THE only commendable features of the work of the Republican Ways and Means Committee in preparing its tariff bill, are the placing of hides and sugar on the free list. There is one drawback to the sugar clause, however, and that is in providing a bounty of two cents per pound for the domestic product. Tariff reform does not contemplate the payment of bounties, as it would permit the producer to buy and sell in a tariff reform market. Under McKinley's monopoly tariff bill the producer must have a bounty or go to the wall, because he is forced to sell in a free trade market and purchase his supplies in a market guarded by a monopolistic tariff. McKinley will have to give all the farmers a bounty if his bill passes, to keep them from the hospitable doors of the poor house.

MCKINLEY attempts to console the farmers for the low prices they are receiving for their crops, by increasing the cost of the manufactured goods which they are compelled to purchase. He tells the farmer that the present depression is due to "foreign agricultural products crowding our home market," and by increasing the import duties on wheat and corn he is going to put a stop to this state of affairs. But the farmer cannot profit as he is to be benefited by this plan, as no wheat or corn is imported, and then McKinley further advises him that his bill is "for the better defense of American homes." McKinley, however, forgets to tell the farmer that he is forced to sell his wheat and corn in accordance with quotations from the Liverpool (free trade) market; and purchase his cloth ing, farm machinery, etc., under a monopoly protection market.

AT a recent banquet of the Army and Navy Club, of Hartford, Conn., President Andrews, of Brown University, an old soldier, was present as an invited guest. In responding to a toast he indulged in the following remarks in regard to service pension scheme:

[illegible] the soldiers [illegible] and until not a stone upon a single foundation is left the object of their attack. Then, and only then, will they receive what they earn by the sweat of their brow.

[illegible] applause [illegible] that he viewed the sentiment of the [illegible] as the pretext and not the [illegible]

McKINLEY'S [illegible] tariff bill if it has not already—will soon—split in the Republican party. Mr. McKenna, Republican from California, has filed a minority report, opposing the "sugar-bounty scheme." No Ways and Means majority was ever so demoralized as this one is. It brings out its little bill half dead to face an opposition encouraged from within its own ranks. McKenna's actions show how wide the committee differences are, for he, like all the rest, had agreed to abide by the decision of the majority. But the time came he thought when he could no longer do so without misrepresenting his constituents. No concession has been made to the carpet manufacturers, who desired cheaper wool that they might continue in business. McKinley has been a long time in preparing this bill, and as a result of the delay and vacillation the Ways and Means Republicans have found more in sense opposition than they met at first. The Republicans should pass this bill and thus ensure a first-class Republican funeral and the election of a Democratic President and Congress. The people want tariff reform and not monopoly protection.

THE following from the Lock Haven Democrat is heartily endorsed by the GAZETTE. "The Altoona Tribune had a five or six line item the other day which stated that if Mr. Wallace was made the Democratic nominee for Governor this fall it would pledge the Pennsylvania Democracy to Hill for President in 1892, and that if Mr. Pattison was made the nominee it would mean Cleveland. It should be distinctly understood by the Tribune and all others that the nomination of either of these gentlemen will mean nothing of the sort. The Democratic party of Pennsylvania is not carried around in any man's vest pocket, to be taken between the political thumb and forefinger and handed out to anybody who may be personally favored by applicants for Gubernatorial or other positions. No, gentlemen, not a bit of it; that day has gone by. What the Democracy are looking for now is a candidate for Governor who will be able to knock the hide off the Republican nominee and seat himself in the chair of State at Harrisburg. This is all at present. The Presidential matter will be attended to by the Democratic people themselves at the proper season."

AN INTELLIGENT MONOPOLIST.

The poetic condition of the senile and effete Agitator causes it to entertain some very peculiar views regarding the tariff question. With all the gravity at the command of so complete a victim of paresis it displays its "dense ignorance" in matters of political economy by asserting that the GAZETTE was in error last week when it stated that the imports of actual farm produce were but one-thousandth part of the exports of agricultural products pure and simple. Then with an evident disregard for the truth it says the agricultural imports for 1889 amounted to $75,927,000. If the shattered advocate of the coal companies' interests in Tioga county will refer to the report of agricultural imports and exports for 1889 it will learn, if capable, that the total amount of imports of this description for the year in question amounted to but $56,636,385. This includes animals, [illegible] fruits and nuts, eggs, hay, hops, seeds, tobacco and vegetables. Now, if fruits and tobacco and animals imported for improving stock should be eliminated from the McKinley bill, the so-called imports of agricultural products would not amount to more than one-half of the amount mentioned by the fat-witted organ of monopoly.

From the report of imports and exports for 1889, it is learned that during that year the agricultural exports amounted to the enormous sum of $599,507,055, or about 73 per cent. of the total exports of the country, breadstuffs and dairy products being the leading articles of export. During the year 1889, the exports of wheat and flour amounted to $89,747,141; and the imports to just $35,615, or less than one-thousandth part of the exports.

This shows very plainly just how much the farmer will be benefited by increasing the tariff on wheat, corn, etc. Every intelligent farmer in the country—the monopoly Agitator to the contrary—knows that the country depends upon the foreign market for the sale of its vast surplus of agricultural products; and every intelligent farmer will readily perceive that he will not be benefited by an increase of duty on these articles. The McKinley must—addition won't work with the [illegible] rule of multiplication.

THE MINORITY REPORT.

Democratic Members of the Ways and Means Committee Dissent.

The minority report on the McKinley tariff bill is signed by all of the five Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee. After declaring for the principle of just and equal taxation, the report begins by saying that the majority, representing the Republican party, has committed itself to the policy of unjust and unequal taxation.

"The prolonged discussion before the Committee during the present session," says the report, "was not between the individuals and corporations who receive the taxes and the consumers who pay them, for very few of these were heard, but between the representatives of the various protected industries, each class contending for higher rates on its own products or for lower rates on the products of others. Except in cases where conflictions were made between interests [illegible] the majority has been [illegible] to the demands of the protected manufacturers. The consumers have been [illegible] right to appear before the committee, and their interests have been [illegible] the majority of the committee. [illegible] the duties [illegible] the markets [illegible] right to appear before the committee, and their interests have been [illegible] the majority of the committee. [illegible] the duties [illegible] the markets [illegible] etc., in the matter the witnesses [illegible] cheers which greeted his remarks, and that he viewed the sentiment of the [illegible] pretext and not the [illegible]

The report then argues [illegible] showing a remarkable hardihood in [illegible] and endorsing the McKinley monopoly tariff bill. "Men are [illegible] vacillating [illegible] they are unable to rest and are busily inventing excuses for the [illegible] glaring inconsistencies of the measure as reported to the House. When Mr. Kinley first announced his bill these papers fairly jumped over each other in their haste to approve of the [illegible]. But strange to say, as [illegible] details was made to the bill it [illegible] and end. After 136 days of [illegible] of wabbling it is difficult [illegible] to say just [illegible] Ways [illegible] Committee [illegible] on the tariff [illegible] Ways [illegible] for the people of the United States. The [illegible] 181,000, paid for [illegible] by our surplus agricultural products. It [illegible] to have [illegible] for the people of the United States. [illegible] one hundred and fifty did not do it.

The Joys We Can Not Get.

Contrary as it is a fact not to know that very few of us get what we want.

We know how the things we need would bring us happiness, and yet

The best we strive to drive us into pleasing [illegible] and yet

We're ever vainly sighing for the joys we can not get.

The tall man wishes he were short, the short man would be tall,

The little man would weigh a ton, the large man would be small;

The dark brunette would be a blonde, the blonde a dark brunette,

And so we're always sighing for the joys we can not get.

The tender youths are wishing for maturer years of men,

And older hearts are sighing to be tender youths again.

Whate'er we have in heaven's a source of real regret,

We'd throw away the joys we have for those we can not get.
